LABOURDIN HOUSE - LAPURDIKO ETXEA

Hikers can take in the distinctive architecture of the traditional "Etxea" Basque house, whose whitewashed façade contrasts with the red and green of its half-timbering. Door frames are constructed mainly from cut stone and houses have wide porches and tiled roofs. Each house bears a name linked to its inhabitants, giving clues as to where they come from. For example: Etxeberri, meaning "the new house". Family X of Etxeberria (of the new house).
